Weakley County is all Hutcherson

Bethany Collins / Co-Viewpoints Editor

As students arrive back on campus and we get a new group of freshmen as well, a change in local leadership is leading many locals and young people to see our county with new hope. Voices were heard, the party letters were ignored, and policy won over the establishment as Weakley County elected Dale Hutcherson as our County Mayor.

During the lead-up to the election, Hutcherson originally planned to run as a Republican but was met with opposition from the Weakley County GOP. Commissioner John Robert Freeman was named the Republican candidate after a clause in the party bylaws said that only "bona fide" party members could run in a caucus.

Hutcherson is not a bona fide member as he missed a primary while he was in law school. This made him one short of the voting in three out of the last four primaries as a Republican to be considered bona fide. This caused a major division within the dominant party of Weakley County. Many people were upset that this bylaw was not made clear to candidates before.

Moving on to the campaigns, Hutcherson was a very prominent candidate on social media and in person. His stance on being a servant leader, a chief marketer, a resource and an advocate for Weakley County seemed to hit deep within the hearts of those who live here and love it just as much. The videos posted on his social media page told the voters what his policies were and where he stood on certain issues facing our community. His heartfelt policies and tearful remarks about his love for the county that raised him sealed his fate as the new mayor.

One cannot ignore the influence of social media as well, with meme accounts like the Unofficial City of Martin giving him the nickname

"Sugar Baby" Hutcherson. While some would take offense to the joking name, Hutcherson seemed to embrace it by liking the posts and even thanking them on a congratulatory post they made about his swearing-in.

Hutcherson won the election that was held on Aug. 1 with 2,982 votes compared to Freeman's 1,593 votes and Danny Powers' 231 votes. On Aug 19, 2024, Hutcherson was sworn into the office of Weakley County Mayor which was vacated after Jake Bynum left in March of this year.

One thing that he also talked a lot about during his campaign is how to use UT Martin as a resource for the county and have the county be a resource for UT Martin. "I think there's some really good ideas that he (Chancellor Freeman) brought to the table and things that will certainly be beneficial to our county as a whole. Not just in Martin or not just for the university, but I really do think that some of the ideas he has will expand and transcend throughout the county."

Mayor Hutcherson also talked about trying to keep students, such as the STEM students who have a track record of getting amazing jobs after graduation, here in Weakley County to help grow the community. He said "It's a great setup and something that Chancellor Freeman and I talked about was trying to make sure that we set up opportunities to retain students that will come out of UT Martin here in Weakley County. You know, I'd love to make sure that we can provide not only a stable infrastructure for them, but job opportunities here in the county that will make them want to stay and, you know, accelerate their career path and raise their families and all those good things. ...I used the term during my campaign, homegrown growth. That is certainly, to me, one of the key ways we can achieve that is making sure we're retaining those students and showing them that we have opportunities right here."

Hutcherson's connection to UT Martin is abundant. While he did not come to UT Martin for his undergraduate, both of his parents are alumni while his grandmother was a professor here at UT Martin for 30 plus years. His wife, Samantha "Sam" Hutcherson, works as the Associate Director of Corporate Relations for the Office of Development within the UT Foundation where she fundraises and engages with corporations across Northwest Tennessee.

As a college student, one thing I have heard from many is that we need more young people in our government. I agree because we need new ideas and outlooks on how to expand our once thriving community. Mayor Hutcherson has those traits. He has a proven track record with his legal practice and his time as a Dresden Alderman. He has already started to be very transparent with events in the community with a new weekly video that gets posted on the official Weakley County Tennessee Facebook page. He is reaching out to the younger audience and is working to show that he will keep his campaign promises because he loves Weakley County and wants to see it grow.

UT wellness officer visits campus

UT Martin also has new Student Health director

University Relations

Wellness and mental health go hand-in-hand, and the University of Tennessee is making both university-wide priorities. This commitment was evident Feb. 1 when Dr. Jessi Gold was named the first chief wellness officer for the UT System. She is also an associate professor of Psychiatry at the UT Health Science Center.

Gold and Dr. Bernie Savarese, UT System vice president for Academic Affairs, Research and Student Success, traveled to UT Martin on Aug. 6 as they visit UT campuses to gain a better understanding of the wellness culture on each campus and related services provided to students.

Gold and Savarese visited with Chancellor Yancy Freeman, Dr. Andy Lewter, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, Dr. Philip Acree Cavalier, provost and senior vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and members of the Student Affairs staff, including Student Health and Counseling Center staff members. They also continued their discussions at lunch where they were joined by UT Martin students.

"Working with Dr. Gold will provide opportunities to share resources across the UT System," Lewter said. "Her expertise will be invaluable as we provide the best possible wellness services to UTM students."

At UT Martin, Allison Castleman began Aug. 12 as the new director of Student Health and Counseling. Castleman is a 2011 alumnus of the UT Martin Department of Nursing. She received a master of science in Nursing Education in 2016 from Western Governor's University and then a post master's certificate in Family Nurse Practitioner from the University of Memphis in 2019.

UT Martin students joined Drs. Jessi Gold and Bernie Savarese for lunch and a discussion about campus wellness Aug. 6 in the Boling University Center. Participating students were Haley Straka, Obion; Kate Pilcher, Obion; Jordan Whitehead, Tupelo, Mississippi; Charlie Shipman, Memphis; Blake Holliman, Greenfield; Dr. Jessi Gold, Dr. Bernie Savarese, Harley Gulley, Belvidere; Hayden Spry, Mount Juliet; Emily Long, Kingston Springs; Tristan Villasica, Martin; and Taylor Harris, Jackson. | Photo credit / University Relations variety of settings ranging from clinical nursing in hospitals and home health to teaching and even staff development and grant management. As a nurse practitioner, she spent the past four years providing health services at the Tennessee Department of Health in Weakley and Carroll counties.

"I am excited to be at UTM and working alongside Dr. Jessi Gold," Castleman said. "I know amazing things are in store."

Gold's new role comes at a critical time. In a February story for the UT Health Science Center, Gold said that her personal experiences and background will help her make an impact across the UT System.

"There's a crisis in this country. There's a crisis on college campuses. There's a crisis in health-care workers, and we need to do something about it," she said in the story. "We need to actively and systematically be approaching this across the spectrum of mental health needs. This role is really a commitment at the highest level to be doing that."

Gold earned bachelor's and master's degrees in Anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania. She earned her medical degree at the Yale School of Medicine and completed her residency in adult psychiatry at Stanford University. She served as chief resident while at Stanford.

"We are so fortunate to have someone of Dr. Gold's caliber here with us at the UT System," Savarese said. "She is a passionate advocate for students', faculty and staff wellbeing. I look forward to what the future will bring as we drive toward being a national leader in our ability to create healthy campuses where everyone can thrive."

Summer scope: What you missed on campus

Chancellor aims for 10,000 students

UT Martin Chancellor Yancy Freeman announced some of the university's goals and recent achievements at the opening meeting for the 2024-25 year.

Freeman said that UT Martin has set a goal of reaching an enrollment of 10,000 students by 2030. "Our goal encompasses undergraduate and graduate students – face-to-face, online and hybrid students – and students enrolled in one of our six regional centers," he told those in attendance.

"On the face of it, the goal to reach 10,000 students seems like it might be somewhere between improbable and impossible. But, what if I told you it would only take a 5.33% increase each year, from this year to 2030, for us to get to that goal? Where it seemed impossible, it is absolutely possible because we are double that now for the upcoming fall semester."

UT Martin honors first Black admin

The Rev. Harold Conner Sr., the first Black administrator at UT Martin, was honored Aug. 17 in a tribute held at Watkins Auditorium in the Boling University Center. Weakley County Mayor Dale Hutcherson presented a biography and photo of Conner at the event. Before coming to UT Martin, Conner was a minister at Fuller Street Baptist Church and became the principal of the Weakley County Training School and encouraged one of his students, Jessie Lou Arnold Pryor, to attend the university as its first Black student in June 1961. After coming to UT Martin to become the assistant dean of students in 1969, he became known as "Dean Conner." He would later become the Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs. Conner retired from UT Martin in 1981 and passed on Oct. 15, 2017.

Mid-South ag conference held

The 26th annual Mid-South Agriculture Finance Conference was held Aug. 7 in Watkins Auditorium in the Boling University Center at the UT Martin.

Begun in 1999, the conference provides up-to-date and pertinent information to help farmers and others succeed in the field of agriculture business.

This year's conference had a strong turnout and featured the return of Dr. David Kohl, professor emeritus of agricultural and applied economics at Virginia Tech University, who has spoken at each of the previous conferences.

Board approves 3% tuition increase

A 3% in-state undergraduate tuition increase for UT Martin students was approved June 25 for the 2024-25 academic year by the UT Board of Trustees during the final day of the board's annual meeting in Knoxville. Specific fees increases were also approved by the board along with a $174 million UT Martin operating budget. UT Martin undergraduate students will pay an additional $256 per year starting this fall for a total tuition payment of $8,802 for the academic year. Undergraduate students will also pay an additional $8 per semester student media fee for a total of $30 per year. A new academic support fee supported by the UT Martin Student Government Association will total $40 per semester and will fund increased student academic support.

Sixth Regional Center opens

The UT Martin welcomed a sixth regional center on May 22 when the Tennessee Higher Education Commission voted for approval of the UT Martin Springfield Center. This center is housed on the Volunteer State Community College-Springfield campus.

The addition of this center comes after a successful partnership between Vol State-Springfield and UT Martin. In November 2023, the campuses entered an agreement that allowed students to pursue post-secondary education in agriculture, education, health care and technology sectors onsite. CPAD hosts career fairs, other help for students

Marques Rice / Co-News Editor

With a new school year beginning, Career Planning and Development (CPAD) is more important than ever.

Preparing for life after college is crucial and must be started from the moment you step onto campus. CPAD's goal is to help each student have a plan for their life during and after college. CPAD assists in providing information and opportunities for students to get internships, jobs and also helps with deciding if graduate school is the right path for them.

Not only does CPAD meet with students personally, but they also host career fairs throughout the year to help students see how many opportunities there are in the area. In the coming weeks, several career fairs are happening with each having a different focus and target groups.

Demetrius Robinson, director of CPAD, says, "The advice is to utilize CPAD a.k.a. Career Services early and often. We can help students to prepare for the workforce."

The career fairs are great ways to connect with businesses in the local area along with finding job opportunities that are only available through certain companies.

"Our office encourages the students to meet with a career counselor. The counselor will assist in helping the students to identify their next steps," Robinson says.

Besides the career fairs, CPAD also provides free headshots on Wednesdays, along with résumé building when stopping by the office. The offices are also where the Captain's Closet is located. This is where free business attire is located and available to all current students.

Campus selected as FirstGen Forward Network partner

University Relations

UT Martin has been made a member of the FirstGen Forward Network.

FirstGen Forward (FGF) is the premier source of evidence-based practices, professional development and knowledge creation for the higher education community to advance the success of first-generation students.

UT Martin is now part of a select group of partner institutions helping to advance the FGF mission: to provide data, training and expertise for colleges and universities across the country to scale and sustain the important work of serving first-generation students.

UT Martin “continues to provide access and develop leaders who are first-generation college students,” said Chancellor Yancy Freeman. “UTM’s participation in FirstGen Forward expands our opportunity to engage with a community of leaders on the best practices for recruiting, enrolling and graduating first-generation college students. We are proud to contribute to the wealth of knowledge to increase educational outcomes for our best and brightest students.”

CPAD also works directly with companies to source workers, which makes that transition for students from college to the workforce even more seamless.

“Our office encourages students to create a LinkedIn and Handshake Profile; by creating a profile this will expose the students to other opportunities outside of Martin. Attending CPAD’s annual career fairs also helps students promote themselves by networking,” Robinson says.

Students may visit CPAD in room 210 of the Boling University Center.

Campus hosts guest speakers Aug. 28

University Relations

UT Martin will welcome two highly noted speakers to campus on Wednesday, Aug. 28, with a free public session scheduled for the afternoon.

Harvard professor and best-selling author Dr. Arthur C. Brooks and Michael Oher, the former Tennessee Titan and member of the Baltimore Ravens team that won Super Bowl XLVII, will speak to students and the public.

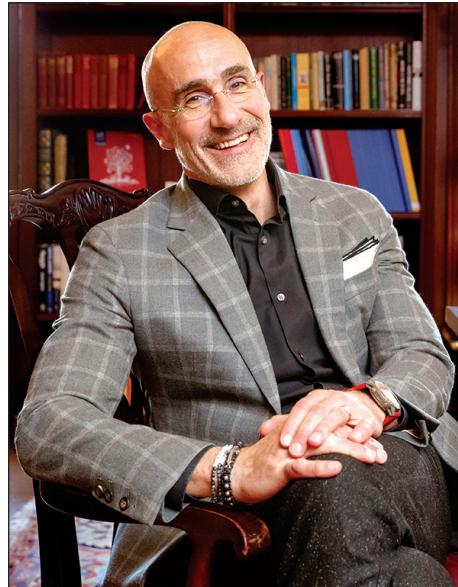

Chancellor Yancy Freeman will moderate a question-and-answer session for both speakers at the 2:30 p.m. session in Watkins Auditorium in the Boling University Center.

The event is sponsored by the Institute of American Civics and the University of Tennessee at Martin.

The two speakers will have a meet-and-greet session at 11 a.m. in Room 206 of the Boling University Center with a select group of university faculty, staff and student administrators as well as media members. The opening 25 minutes will feature remarks from the two speakers, and the floor will then be opened for questions for 20 minutes.

At noon, the two will speak in the Kathleen and Tom Elam Center to UT Martin students, with Oher making introductory remarks for Brooks, who will deliver a traditional keynote speech called "Build the Life You Want."

Brooks will speak to the public at 2:30 p.m. in Watkins Auditorium, where the keynote address will be "Love Your Enemies." This session is open to all faculty, staff and community members. Admission is free for this session.

Dr. Arthur C. Brooks, left, a Harvard professor and author, and Michael Oher, right, a former NFL player who was the subject of the movie "The Blind Side," will speak at UT Martin Wednesday, Aug. 28.

Brooks is a professor at the Harvard Kennedy School and the Harvard Business School, where he teaches courses on leadership and happiness. He is also a columnist at The Atlantic, where he writes the popular "How to Build a Life" column.

Brooks is the No. 1 New York Times bestselling author of 13 books, including "Build the Life You Want"

– co-authored with Oprah Winfrey in 2023 – and "From Strength to Strength: Finding Success, Happiness, and Deep Purpose in the Second Half of Life."

Brooks is one of the world's leading experts on the science of human happiness, appearing in the media and traveling the world to teach people in private companies, universities, public agencies and faith communities how they can live happier lives and bring greater well-being to others.

Outside of his NFL career, Oher is best known as the subject of the movie "The Blind Side," which is about his experience in overcoming economic, academic and life challenges to play football for the University of Mississippi and then at the professional level.

With his personal experience of poverty and homelessness, Oher now dedicates his life to supporting disadvantaged youth through his charity, the Oher Foundation, which empowers youth with opportunities in education, mentorship and community support.

Oher was able to navigate the hardships of life as a foster kid who went from the streets of Memphis all the way to the NFL. He became a two-time all-American at the University of Mississippi and led the Baltimore Ravens to victory in Super Bowl XLVII.

After an eight-year NFL career, Oher now focuses on his foundation, which is based in Nashville. His inspiring story is detailed in the New York Times best-selling books "I Beat The Odds: From Homelessness To The Blind Side and Beyond" and "When Our Back's Against the Wall: Fame, Football, and Lessons Learned through a Lifetime of Adversity."

UT Martin sets record for vet school admission

University Relations

This fall, a record 28 UT Martin veterinary science and technology graduates will enter veterinary schools across the U.S. and overseas.

Dr. Todd Winters, dean of the College of Agriculture and Applied Sciences, said 20 of those graduates will attend the UT College of Veterinary Medicine.

"The 28 students (accepted into postgraduate studies in one year) far surpasses the record of 21 that we had last year," he said.

UT Martin also graduated 38 students in the field of veterinary technology, another school record. These graduates came to UT Martin from all three regions of Tennessee, and many will return to these areas following completion of their careers to serve Tennessee communities.

Dr. Jason Roberts, professor of Animal Science and the program director of veterinary technology, said this surge in veterinary graduates comes at a good time.

"Not only will many of these future veterinarians and veterinary nurses contribute to the shortage of small animal veterinary professionals, but several of these students also come from agricultural backgrounds and have an interest in working with large animals."

According to an article published in the April 29 issue of USA Today, a report by Mars Veterinary Health showed the U.S. will need as many as 55,000 additional veterinarians by 2030 to meet the increasing need for companion animals' health care. The article added that by 2030, there may be a shortage of up to 24,000 companion animal veterinarians, even accounting for students who will become veterinarians in the next decade.

In July 2022, the Association of American Veterinary Medical Colleges issued a statement regarding the shortage in the U.S. veterinary workforce.

"Significant shortages of veterinarians exist across all sectors of professional activity and at all levels of specialization," it states. "... The available evidence indicates that these shortages are a result of systemic, long-term trends in pet ownership and demand for veterinary services, along with limited capacity for training veterinary professionals."

The statement added that in 2019, there were 2,000 to 3,000 more open jobs than veterinarians available to hire.

"UT Martin is fortunate to have an experienced team of five veterinarians and five veterinary technicians who teach in the program," Roberts said. "The program also utilizes a 700-acre teaching farm and small-animal veterinary clinic where students gain hands-on experience from veterinary professionals with large, small and exotic animals as they prepare for veterinary careers."

Here's how being 'very demure' got trendy

Adrianna' Carter / Photographer

Almost every day, there is a new trend which causes society to hop on the wave before it dies down. In this case, it's a catchphrase that has got the world in a frenzy. This term has people questioning themselves if they are acting very 'demure', 'mindful', or even 'cutesy'. How did this get popularized overnight? All it took was a simple TikTok video of Jools Lebron explaining how women like herself should wear their makeup, dress for an interview, and various things that she wouldn't do when interviewing while entering the professional field. Being 'Very demure' took the world by storm without Lebron even realizing how big it would blow up across different media platforms including X (formerly known as Twitter), Instagram, Snapchat and also Facebook. Millions of people (even celebrities!) around the world included the phrase in videos causing it to even make it to the White House in a matter of time.

The word 'demure' means to be reserved, modest, and shy. It is typically used to give compliments on a woman's appearance, style, or the way she holds herself up due to the amount of confidence she may have. 'Demure' has now become a part of most individuals' vocabulary which is a good thing because it allows people to expand their vocabulary. However, the constant use of the word can over time can get annoying. A twitter user expressed, "Very demure, very cutesy is the most annoying phrase trend. I physically cringe every time I hear it." One thing that has stood out to people other than the word itself is one of the many statements that Lebron used, "A lot of you girls go to the interview looking like Marge Simpson and go to the job looking like Patty and Selma. Not demure." Which has people rethinking their dress attire for work.

Lebron has even took being demure to her first TV debut on Jimmy Kimmel Live! Although, it was revealed shortly after her appearance that someone has filed trademark for her famous catchphrase without her permission, she will forever be credited to the world as being very mindful, very demure.

Football kicks off season at K-State

Co-Sports Editors Connor Butts & Nate Szarzynski, Co-Features Editor Chyler Lee

The UT Martin Skyhawks open the 2024 season with a grueling matchup at Bill Snyder Family Stadium against the Kansas State Wildcats at 6 p.m. on Aug 31.

The Skyhawks will look to continue their success into 2024. Like Georgia a year ago, the Skyhawks will face their toughest opponent of the season in week one as the Skyhawks head into Big XII country to face the 18th ranked Kansas State Wildcats.

The Wildcats are returning 50.5% of production from their 2023 Big XII championship roster. They most notably lose production at the quarterback position, with the loss of starting quarterback Will Howard who transferred to Ohio State this past season. Howard will be replaced by Avery Johnson; the sophomore quarterback from Wichita, Kansas is a former 4-star recruit and was the number one player in Kansas coming out of high school.

Running backs DJ Giddens and Dylan Edwards are two major pieces of the Wildcat offense. Giddens was Kansas State's leading rusher last season with 1,226 yards at 5.5 yards per carry and 10 touchdowns for the Wildcats. Edwards is an incoming transfer from Colorado who put up 620 all-purpose yards and five touchdowns for the Buffaloes last season and will likely be a threat on the ground and through the air.

The Wildcats also return veteran players on the defensive end with senior linebacker Austin Moore and senior safety Marques Sige. Both players tied as the leading tacklers for the Wildcats in 2023 with 63 tackles. Sige and Moore will make it tough for the Skyhawks to break any big runs with their sure tackling on the front and back end of the defense.

The Wildcats offense averaged 241.2 yards through the air and 204.1 yards on the ground in 2023. With the addition of Dylan Edwards to an already good running back group for the Wildcats and the elite rushing capabilities of Avery Johnson, expect the Wildcats to match or even ramp up their rushing production this season.

The Skyhawks are coming into the 2024 season looking different compared to last year. The new additions to the roster have the chance to make a difference in the opening weeks.

Running back (RB) Sam Franklin transferred to the Oklahoma Sooners after coming off of a strong season of 223 carries, 1378 yards, and 11 touchdowns while earning All-American honors. The Skyhawks look to replace that production with returning RB Narkel LeFlore and newcomer Patrick Smith from Vanderbilt. LeFlore is coming off a season of 382 yards and four touchdowns while Smith is coming off a 327 yard and two touchdown season.

The offense will also be missing tight end (TE) DJ Nelson who transferred to Alabama A&M after a four touchdown season. The Skyhawks brought in two new TEs in Tyler Dostin from Kent State and Katerian LeGrone from Delta State. The team hopes to have a new one-two punch in the run and pass game with the newcomers.

UCF gained a great defensive end (DE) in Dayton Doston after coming off of an award winning season in Martin that included 19.5 tackles for loss and seven sacks. Sophomore Skyhawk defensive tackle Charles Perkins is taking over one of the starting roles at DE after being named freshman All-American and having a four sack season. These are the players to watch as the Skyhawks face an uphill battle away against the Kansas State Wildcats.

The Skyhawks continue the 2024 campaign against Southeast Missouri (SEMO), North Alabama and Missouri State.

2023 with a record of 4-7, losing their last three contests. This will be the Skyhawks first matchup against a conference opponent. Last season, the Skyhawks cruised to a 41-14 victory at home against the Redhawks.

The first homestand takes place week three against the Northern Alabama Lions on Sept 14 at Hardy M. Graham stadium at 6 p.m.. The Skyhawks defeated the Lions last season 37-21. The Skyhawks and Lions have only played each other once in the last 33 seasons.

The Skyhawks will then host the Missouri State Bears on Sept 21 at 6 p.m.. The Skyhawks defeated the Bears last year 38-31 in a close matchup. The Skyhawks have only defeated the Bears twice in the nine games against each other all time.

The Skyhawks finish the month of September with an away matchup against the Kennesaw State Owls. The Skyhawks have not faced the Owls since their 44-27 loss to Kennesaw State in 2022. The Skyhawks look to head into homecoming with the momentum of a big road game. The game is on Sept. 28 at 5 p.m.
